

QLD State Committee Event | 9 June 2019

Elucidating the mysteries of acupuncture: an analysis of clinical applications according to historical texts

Presented by Michael Brown

This lecture will be divided into two sections. The first will be a discussion of the creation of acupuncture, from the Mingtang Jing in the Han dynasty, to the texts clarifying the channel pathways such as Sishi Jing Fahui, and then finally texts that began to consolidate information such as the Leijing Tuyi and the Zhenjiu Dacheng.

The second section will then analyse information from this text, and discuss the first practical applications of points from the Mingtang Jing, with commentary from the Qing dynasty text Explanation of Points and Channels, which discusses the point name, location and how the point treats the indicated diseases. Then further information will be discussed such as songs and poems developed in later dynasties. This lecture will aim not only to teach practitioners immediate uses for acupuncture points and prescriptions, but how to study them and further their clinical practise in themselves.

This talk is both for students and practitioners who want to deepen their understanding of the history of acupuncture and how it was utilised since its inception. The attendee will leave with an expanded knowledge on how to apply written materials to clinical scenarios.

About the presenter/s

Michael Brown

Michael Brown has practised acupuncture for the last 10 years. In that time, he has also learned Chinese formally at the University of Queensland. He is currently translating a Qing commentary of the Mingtang Jing called Explanations of Channels and Points that will be released in the second half of the year.
