

VIC State Committee Event | A brief introduction to most commonly used manipulative methods in Tuina | 16 September 2018

Presented by Edwin Miao

This workshop is a brief introduction to most commonly-used manipulative methods in Tuina. Namely, Yizhi Chan Tuina (一指禅推拿) and Gun Fa Tuina (滚法推拿) and Nei Gong Tuina (内功推拿).

Participants are encouraged to learn and practise these methods in the workshop. It is a hands-on workshop that includes exercise and training.

Upon completion, participant will:

- Have a better understanding about these manipulative methods.
- Be able to start to use these methods in their daily clinical practice.

About the presenter/s

Edwin graduated from Shanghai University of Chinese Medicine in 1984. He was first employed as assistant research clinician for Tuina research. A year later he began working as a trainee radiologist at the Yue Yang Hospital, affiliated with Shanghai University of Chinese Medicine. He was then promoted as a senior radiologist in the radiology department of the Yue Yang Hospital. Major duties included supervision of trainee radiologists and junior radiologists, along with teaching duties, which included teaching Chinese medicine students from Shanghai University of Chinese Medicine.

After a few years as a senior radiologist, Edwin decided to move back to practising acupuncture and Chinese medicine in a public-funded Chinese medicine centre in Shanghai. After migrating to Australia, he began a Chinese medicine and acupuncture practice.

Edwin has authored and published several clinical research papers since 2007. All publications indexed in PubMed/Medline, Embase and Scopus. Edwin has also been a regular reviewer for several top-ranking peer-reviewed journals and appointed as a current editorial board member in a UK based, high impact peer-reviewed journal, Complementary Therapies in Medicine.
